Minnesota gambling laws

At the moment, Minnesota players have the option of playing at social casinos, or at an offshore online casino.

Whilst there are many well-established offshore online casinos in Minnesota, the ese aren't regulated or licensed in the state, so they come with an element of risk

Minnesota does have a lottery and, at one time, the state allowed tickets and eS cratch tickets to be sold online.

However, lawmakers decided to stop online sales in 2015.

However, the state does have the Minnesota Gambling Control Board, which overse es other lawful forms of gambling and would likely be the one to regulate online casinos if and when they are legalized.

If you do manage to bet legally within the state, either online or offline, then you will be required to pay tax on your winnings.

5% and you will need to remember to declare this to the IRS.
